HOW THIS WORKS

Every project does not need a full CMS. We offer two clear post-launch models: a fully managed studio workflow, or a lightweight editing setup for essential content updates.

TWO WAYS TO MANAGE YOUR SITE AFTER LAUNCH

Managed Site is the most streamlined option. The studio handles updates for you, ensuring the website remains visually refined, stable, and aligned with the original design intent.

Editable Site adds a lightweight editing layer for practical day-to-day updates such as text, images, contact details, and SEO fields. It gives clients autonomy where it matters, without turning the project into a full CMS build.

For projects that go beyond essential updates and require structured content systems, user access control, or operational workflows, a custom CMS or admin solution can be scoped separately.

COMMON QUESTIONS

A clean website setup now does not limit what the system can become later.

Do I get an admin panel?

Not by default. Our standard website delivery model is studio-managed, which keeps the project faster, cleaner, and more cost-efficient. If you need to update text, images, contact details, or SEO yourself, we can add a lightweight content editor. For larger or more complex websites, full CMS and custom admin systems are available as separate solutions.

Why is a full CMS not included in every website?

Because not every project needs one. A full CMS adds scope, technical overhead, content architecture, testing, and long-term maintenance. For many brochure-style websites, it creates unnecessary complexity. Our approach keeps the base website efficient and premium, while offering scalable content options only when they are actually needed.

What can I edit with the Editable Site option?

Typically: text content, selected images, contact information, SEO basics, FAQ, services, testimonials, and simple news entries if included in the agreed scope. The layout, design system, and deeper structural logic remain protected.

What if I need something more advanced later?

The website can be extended into a larger CMS-driven system later if the project grows. This allows you to start lean and scale only when the business actually needs it.
